387/16 Porthcothan Beach

The stream has recently altered its course. A third of the water is now eroding the Dunes in the area of the Lifeguard hut. This is mainly due to the unprecedented wet weather and a shingle bar on the north side of the beach. The meeting discussed the problem with the help and advice of the public present who represented important sectors of the beach's committees. It became apparent that a long term solution is required. In the short term a temporary solution to prevent further the loss of the dunes was needed. The meeting voted to give permission for a group of volunteers to place dumpy bags, filled with sand & stone from the Beach, so to divert the water eroding the dunes back to the main flow.

Mr Moncaster agreed to coordinate the volunteer effort. Further investigation as to the long term solution to prevent further loss of the dunes will be actioned and advice sought from Cornwall Council.
